Critic Feels

Art Reflects Advances

"Contemporary art is the reflection of changing world conditions," remarked Jules Langsner, art critic, to Valley College students and friends, at the third lecture series of the Athenaeum program.

Langsner, who writes for six magazines in the United States and abroad, and who is assistant editor for Arts and Architecture magazine, spoke Monday on the subject, "An Art Critic Looks at Modern Painting." He emphasized the role social conditions of the world play on the artist's in-"Different interpretations in the types of art manifest with clarity the growing specialization in the constant evolution of world advancement," stated the critic.

Langsner continued saying that an example of the impression scientific advancement has on art is the feeling of vastness and spaceness the airplane and inter-continental ballistic missile has given to art.

Important to remember is the fact that the artist's ability to capture and creatively produce these new experiences of the changing world is the most valid vardstick for evaluating the quality of art, stressed Langsner.

2000 Apply For Admission Next Spring

More than 2000 students presently attending Valley day school have made appointments in the Admissions Office to enroll for the coming spring semester, according to Robert Nassi, dean of admissions and guidance. An estimated 1500 students are expected to make applications for admission before registration closes, he said.

Of the unlisted students, 1000 new students from high schools and other colleges will enroll, according to Nassi. The remaining 500 are currently attending Valley and for some reason haven't made counseling appointments yet, he said. "Approximately 100 students are enrolling every day," Nassi said. "We expect, this to keep up until registration ends." Two hundred fifty students were fully registered during the first two days.

Closes During Christmas

Running until Friday, Dec. 19, advanced registration will close during the Christmas vacation, resuming on Monday, Jan. 5. From that date, enrollment will be continued until Feb. 6, the day spring classes begin.

"Instructor-counselors are making appointments only until Jan. 20," reminded Nassi. "Scheduling counseling appointments during finals would be too difficult."

New classes in the spring day cuiriculum total 19.

Estimate Enrollees An estimated 5200 students are expected to enroll, according to Donald Click, dean of extended day. This is a rise of 200 from the current semester.

Seven new courses are being offered in the evening division classes, said James Cox, extended day coordinator. They include Automation 4, industrial application of electronics; General Engineering 46, survey of engineering operations; Industrial Supervision 5, organization and management; Physical Education 38, fundamentals of football and soccer: Political Science 1, government of the U.S.; Russian 1, beginning study of the Russian language: and Secretarial Science 48

Extended day registration will end Feb. 9, excluding the Christmas vacation Dec. 19 to Jan. 5. All applications are made in the Admissions Office.

In the world today there are two great powers locked in a struggle to determine the best way of life for the masses, including the rich and elite through the lower classes. Making history today in the cold war are Russian Marxian philosophy and the United States democratic republic principle.

Each doctrine must have one provision which will make or break it—the part of the philosophy that gives the masses hope to attain more than they now have. There always will be the have and the have-not groups and the desire to improve oneself.

Our founding fathers were very much aware of this when they drew up the constitution because no sooner had the ink dried on the first constitution, when the cry rang out for a guarantee of civil rights to every person. Thus came the Bill of Rights, the first ten amendments to the constitution.

Although this may not be apparent to the average American, this is the crux of the struggle for the top rung in the world today. The advancing Red propaganda is all based on the more advantageous communist doctrine of socialism. This is the main reason hunger-starved countries such as China have succumbed to the

Our future in stemming the communist tide boils down to the effectiveness of selling our nation, its Bill of Rights, to the overburdened countries of the world. So, as the 167th anniversary of the Bill of Rights approaches Monday one should stop to think of the piece of paper on which is written the future of the greatest nation

Elections Need Rules

It would be a much simpler life if there weren't any rules to follow and no laws with which to comply. But, due to a simple reason, man himself, it becomes necessary in the course of events to set down a pattern which all should follow.

Society places certain restrictions on man, designed both to protect him physically as well as in transactions.

Valley College is presently in need of a few standard rules by which candidates running for student body offices should conduct their campaigning. There are no rules for campaigning that are carried from semester to semester.

In the recent special election, which was held to select a new student body president, it was apparent that some "underhanded" methods were used to solicit votes.

Charges have been made that one of the candidates campaigned at the voting booth and assertedly had a "supply" of extra student body cards available to those students who did not have a card with them.

An administrative policy that no class interruptions may be made without approval from the main office was broken in the

The policy was violated by members of one of the candidate's campaign committee. A night school instructor was asked if the committee could enter the class to give a speech on the candidate and hand out publicity circulars. He said it would be all right if the permission had been granted by the main office. He was told

Upon checking with Donald Click, dean of extended day school, it was learned that no official approval had been given.

Using another student's student body card and breaking an administrative policy deliberately are definitely wrong. Some of the other charges cannot be justifiably declared illegal, but they certainly are not ethical.

Noting these instances, the question arises as to the outcome of the election had these tactics not been used. There is no answer

Though it is not possible to remedy what has already happened, it is in the power of the Executive Council to set up rules that would curb the reocurrence of unethical campaigning in the

Afghanstan Exchange Student Favors American Work, Educational System

With smoggy tears rolling down his cheeks, Abdul Latifi, Valley Afghan exchange student, confesses that he prefers the beautiful clear climate and fresh air of his homeland to that of California.

Latifi came to America from Afghanistan. His government sent him here to study foreign relations. He has been a U.S. resident for a year and seven months, but has yet to accustom himself completely to the American way of life. He qualified for study here by maintaining a "B" average, and because he intended to follow his father in his job as a foreign ambassador. Latifi's father is now in China acting as official ambassador.

Big city confusion overwhelmed Latifi when he first arrived here. He says that he had no idea of the vast industry and the tremendous amount of traffic. The freeways are something of which he had never dreamed.

Women of America baffled him. "In Afghanistan when a boy dates a girl it is similar to an American engagement," said Latifi. The girls of his country never date two or three boys at the same time. They have a sort of courting system there, he ex- to his country he will do his best to plained, where girls become acquainted with boys, but they have no dating. In the majority of cases it is considered customary for marriage to follow the dating period.

As an avocation Latifi writes. He has published eight plays in his homeland. He wrote the first one at the age of 18 and his last, which is now playing, before he left for the States. He wants to adapt these plays into English and see if he can get them published here.

Roski Reigns

With a strong and dominating force, Ed Roski, newly elected student body president, stormed the Executive Council with his radical changes last week.

From the beginning to the end of Thursday's meeting, the first of which Roski was in charge, he surprised council members with his immediate reorganization of the group.

Roski assigned officers to committees and asked that the committees' outlines on the project be ready this week.

A wise move, when veteran observers remember the "old days" of lackadaisical attitudes toward responsibilities. Of course the big if is, as always, present. Will the Executive Council adhere to the "Roski Deal" or will some members continue in their present last-minute planning?

What I can't help wondering is whether the "lion's roar" will turn into a cat's meow in the future.

As compared to Carl Bedwell, Roski is of a different category. Bedwell was forcefull without being dominating. Roski uses force and domination. although with what seems like an unselfish attitude, at least from a bystander's viewpoint.

Where is Roski leading the Executive Council, or should I saw dragging, as is the case with a few of the members? Roski is either heading for calamity or will have one of the most organized student governing bodies

The real test of the new regime will be apparent in the success or failure

Bustling with enthusiasm, Roski is at times apt to forge ahead without clearly seeing his objective. If this i the case with the Executive Council he may spell doom for the unity needed to have a smoothly run or-

The dance class became overflowing ith students, and there was a great eed for a full time instructor. Thus liss Ruby Zuver was added to the omen's physical education departent with the teaching of two modn dance classes, one beginning and ne advanced, as part of her schedule. Miss Zuver's dancers showed their ersatility in one of the Christmas lows. One group was concrete in eir interpretation of "Winter Wonerland" by depicting ice skaters, hile another group used a backround of bongo drums and bells to onvey an abstract performance of artians invading toyland.

Although Miss Zuver and her dancs produced appreciated performices (some of the dancers perrmed in the school talent show and Fiesta), with Valley's growing popation of dancers a more experinced instructor was needed.

Recognizing this need the college e something added to its physical education deartment Mrs. Tirzah Lundgren, who as 12 years experience in teaching ance. She has three dance classes, vo beginning and one advanced. Men in the classroom is a problem

Men most adaptable to advanced modern dance are those experienced in gymnastics or theater arts.

A former Huntington Park High teacher, Mrs. Lundgren expresses her joy at not having to face the difficulty faced by Mrs. Economides—canned music on the same show with live music. She is very enthusiastic over the musical facilities at Valley, the choir, orchestra and band.

Her dance groups will perform to music sung by the choir in this year's Christmas program.

The future of modern dance at Valley is bright, if the hopes and plans of Mrs. Lundgren become realities. Her mind's eye is fixed on production numbers done on the stage of the auditorium and symposiums. These are workshop sessions in which a professional dancer teaches techniques to dancers from various schools.

Another ambition of the dance instructor is to have more male students in her classes to balance the female faction in projects.

Mrs. Lundgren has danced at the Hollywood Bowl, Philharmonic, Greek Theater and done night club work. Before coming to Valley, she taught dancing at Hamilton High, Pasteur Junior High and Huntington Park

'Manuscript' to Run Creative Material

Valley College's Writers' Club is again sponsoring a writing contest, in which all students may submit creative work, including short stories, short plays, poems and literary criticism. All material may be submitted to Sylvain Bernstein, club sponsor, in Room 6. The contest ends at 3 p.m.,

Winners in different categories will see their work published in "Manuscript," the campus literary magazine. The pre-publication sale of "Manuscript 5," to come out in April, will be held during the week of Jan. 12-16. Price of the new "Manuscript" will be 60 cents.

Contest is open to all day and extended day students registered between Jan. 1, 1958, and Jan. 1, 1959. The work must be original and previously unpublished. Writers will retain further publication rights in full.

Four awards will be distributed to the writers of the best prose and poetry submitted. Three members of the Valley College faculty will be elected by members of the Writers' Club to judge the entries. Decisions of the judges will be final.

Manuscripts should be typed, double spaced. Material entered in the contest must bear no mark of identification except the title. A sealed envelope should accompany the material; outside will appear only the title of the material submitted, inside should be the entry form. This form may be picked up in Room 6, Bern-

Bernstein advises that students should not wait until the last few weeks. No material will be accepted after 3 p.m., Jan. 16.

Anna Perrelli was last year's sweepstakes winner. She was first place winner in short stories and also a poetry winner. These will be adult stories handling all aspects of life. Some of the articles might be printed as supplementary material in English 1 and 2.

Last year's issue contained humor in the form of political satire by Shirley Wood, short stories full of humor such as Jack DuLong's story about a straight-A dog who took over a bank.

Book reviews were also included. John Hersey's "The Wall" was reviewed by June Berck, and John Steinbeck's novel, "Grapes of Wrath," was discussed by Alice Elconin.

Success Story

The feeling that swept over the spectators during Valley's three appearances in last weekend's Bakersfield Invitational Basketball Tournament was electric.

Many of the fans present as Valley swept to the tourney championship must have thought that they were watching a good basketball squad and didn't realize what actually was taking place.

Ed Tobey, sports editor of the Bakersfield Renegade Rip, knew what was happening and summed it up when he said to me, "You guys are really fired-up. Your squad wants to win so bad that

Ralph Caldwell, Monarch cage coach, said in the restaurant after the whole affair was history, "In all my years of coaching I have never seen such spirit on the bench."

With all honesty, I can say that I as much as this most recent one. It was the perfect junket.

Winning the tourney was enough to make the trip outstanding. The attitude of the team coupled with the squad's spirit made the trip exquisite.

Caldwell is the most outstanding psychological coach I have ever known in any sport. Diagnosing the problem with his squad to perfection, Caldwell transformed the Lions from a sorry looking outfit to a fired-up contingent within 36 hours.

While enjoying Malkin's stay at Valley, the basketball fan can look at one of the best college prospects since the days of Jim Halsten, later a star at UCLA.

He returned to the junior varsity team and was leading the league with a 21-point average when coach Guy Wrinkle called him up to fill the varsity gap left by three injured players.

Defying the added pressure of playing his first varsity game, Malkin led all Hollywood scorers in the first quarter and ended up with 12 points against Fairfax.

Two games later marked one of the fondest memories in Jim's career at Hollywood. With butterflies still stamping around in his stomach and the pressure of moving to varsity, Malkin scored 15 points in the first quarter and finished with 21 points to lead his teammates to a win over Hamilton.

One might say that Malkin showed the greatest amount of improvement after he finished high school. He showed a talent for rising to the ability of his competitors playing on the Phelps-Terkel team.

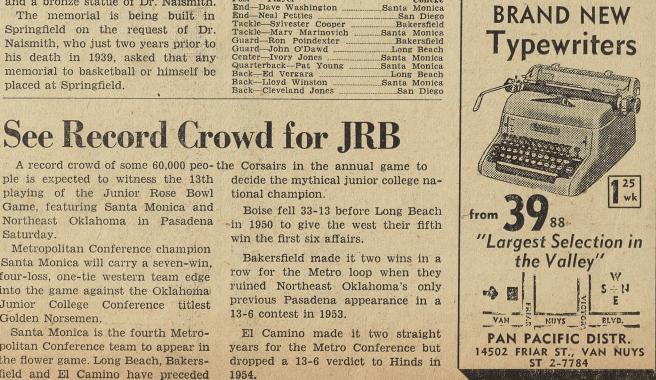

Runyon's team of future SC prospects included prep hotshots with press clippings bulging in their scrapbooks, but Malkin finished second in team scoring in both of his two summers with 14 and 17-point averages.

Don't miss him now because the next time you might want to see Malkin play you may have to travel to the home-court of some large university and sit with the thousands of others that want a glimpse of a top flight basketball player in action.

North Hollywood High, underwent his college cage birth when he bucketed 29 points in Valley's wins over Modesto, Bakersfield and San Jose in the tourney.

Hitting on 20 of 30 field-goal attempts in the Lions' first four engagements, Heimel added 10 floorshots and nine free-throws to bring his season total to 80.

Wold and Jim Malkin lead the squad's scorers with 39 field-goals and 20 free-throws each for 98 points. Malkin has seen action in all seven seasonal tilts while Wold sat out the opener with the Alumni due to a shoulder separation.

Malkin, another returning All-Conference selection, led the way through the Bakersfield event, scoring 46 markers and providing the two part of Valley's one-two backboard

The one part of the Lions' domination of the boards in all of their seven outings is John Berberich. A six-foot eight-inch center, Berberich helped the locals' effort with 30 points.

Hailed by Caldwell as a remarkably improved ballplayer since the beginning of the year, Berberich's board work brought acclaim from the radio announcer broadcasting the tourney as well as most of the spectators. Caldwell has expressed optimism over the prospect of Berberich replacing Whitey Williams, last season's center and team leading rebounder.

Bruce Powers rounds out the Lion starter. Scoring at a 6.4 average per contest, returning letterman and starter Powers is a defensive demon as well as a consistent and cool offensive ballplayer.

To the joy of Caldwell and the 20odd Monarch rooters that attended the tourney, the Lion bench proved to be a potent weapon. Calling on his bench to rest the starters with little hesitation, Caldwell saw his substitutes score 22 per cent of his squad's 213 tourney points.

Even brighter than the offensive feats of the bench were the defensive efforts. Playing starters Malkin, Ber-

Al Heimel, an All-City prep from berich and Powers only three minute of the second half and Wold an Heimel only three quarters of the game, Caldwell watched his bench take a halftime lead of 14 points and hold on for a 13 point 77-64 victory over Modesto in the lid-lifter.

The bench was again called upor to rest the starters for the finals i the semi-final game with Bakersfield Substitutes Alonzo Randall, Fran Jeras, Ivan Bennett, Keith Buchanar Roman Carter and Nick Bono turned a 16-point halftime lead into a 23 point 81-58 win.

Caldwell used all of the 14 squad members that made the trip.

The extent of the injury and the length of time that Dick Baird will be sidelined is still undetermined, ac cording to Caldwell. Baird cracked ribs during the game at College o Sequoias Nov. 29.

With Bruce Kidder coaching and John Green leading the way, Pierce has also lost only twice in seven outings. All-City player-of-the-year at San Fernando High, 18-year old Green has led the Brahma scorers.
